Editorial Policy

Revista Signos. Estudios de Lingüística receives submissions of scientific articles for blind revision. All articles should conform to the formal requirements and should address the fields of psycholinguistics, discourse linguistics, applied linguistics, or computational linguistics.

Submissions should be unpublished works and should not be under consideration for publication elsewhere.

The Editor reserves the right not to send for review those manuscripts that do not comply with the Guidelines for Publication.

Manuscripts should be sent as an electronic copy in Word for Windows to revista.signos@ucv.cl. Once the manuscript has been received, the author(s) will receive an acknowledgment of receipt reporting whether the manuscript complies with the Guidelines for Publication and/or with the fields of specialty required before the reviewing process.

Review of manuscripts is done by at least two anonymous reviewers and is followed by their report within six months. The Editor will e-mail the author(s) about the possibility of publishing the manuscript, along with an acknowledgment of acceptance, a 'under review with observations' or, if necessary, a report containing the inappropriateness of the manuscript.

If the author receives a report 'under review with observations', the author should submit to revista.signos@ucv.cl the new modified version within 45 days. The editorial process will not continue, if authors have been notified of the first review and have not re-submitted the manuscript within this period of time.

In re-submitting the revised revision, indicate clearly (in a forwarding letter as a separate Word document) how the referees' comments have been addressed. The manuscript will be sent for a new review by the same anonymous reviewers, who will report acceptance, with or without observations.

If the manuscript is accepted by the reviewers, authors must send a digital version of the manuscript. Authors will receive acknowledgment of acceptance, stating issue number of the journal and possible date of publication.

The Editor reserves the right to modify the text once accepted, and to include articles accepted for publication in the issue he deems most appropriate.

Authors are responsible for both the scientific content of their manuscript and the opinions expressed which are not necessarily endorsed by the Editor.
