Guidelines for Book Reviews

1. The review should be headed with the work's full data, including page numbers and ISBN.
2. The review's complete text should be a critique and should therefore express the author's opinion on the work reviewed.
3. The topic and central issue should be presented at the beginning of the introduction.
4. Audience or potential readers should be specified.
5. The work's structure (chapters and sections) should be presented along with a complete synthesis of its content.
6. Glossaries, appendices, or annotated bibliography should be mentioned.
7. The work under review should be associated with the author's other works and with other works on the same subject.
8. The work should be contextualized, considering the moment and the place in which it has been published.
9. The author's full name, e-mail address, and institution for which s/he works should be stated, regardless of whether the author is a student, professor or researcher.
10. The work must always correspond to the formal aspects and References listed in the Guidelines for Publication.
